

PREFACE

Dear readers,

In the 12th issue of the Proceedings of collected papers of teachers and assistants of Islamic Pedagogical Faculty of the University of Zenica we present fifteen new papers that, according to their structure, are situated into scientific-research fields in which the Faculty traditionally develops its scientific-research activities, such as Religious studies, Social research, Islamic thought and civilization and Language and literature.

As a serious serial publication which has undergone a process of indexation in EBSCO and CEEOL databases, the Proceedings are arranged with respect to the application of modern publishing standards prescribed for these publications, which obligates us to, with the help of our respected reviewers, carefully take care of the quality of papers that we publish. The theme that they engage in this issue is current and contemporary, and we sincerely hope that some of these papers will arouse your attention, and help in the consideration of similar issues and prompt you to further research.

We want to express our sincere gratitude to all the authors who have offered their papers for our Proceedings and thus contributed to publishing the new issue. We thank all the reviewers on their objective assessments of papers and all other associates of the Proceedings who have contributed their efforts for preserving its quality and continuity.
